

Intern spotlight

Take a closer look at Molly Cunningham and her time here at Cook.

by Kate McNeal, External Communications intern

Met Molly! She is a recent graduate of Indiana University, where she studied Spanish and journalism with a concentration in public relations through the Media School. She is the Marketing and Communications intern for the Vascular division.

Molly's role includes working on internal communications, with a focus on understanding different channels that are used to communicate within the company. She hopes to work in communications in the healthcare industry throughout her career, and after four years at IU, she was reluctant to leave Bloomington.

"Bloomington has become such a huge part of my life," she said. "Finding this internship brought together my desire to stay here and to work in healthcare."

Molly's favorite part of her job so far has been Cook's family-oriented culture and being able to meet a lot of people.

"I feel like I'm a part of the team, and people really want to get to know me," she said. "People here care a lot about their work, but they can still have fun and enjoy what they're doing."
